All costs for the conference (including transportation to it) will be borne by the Committee on Christian Education, which will provide food and local transportation as necessary.

The purpose of the OPC Timothy Conference is to seek out and encourage godly young Orthodox Presbyterian men to consider the gifts that God has given them and whether the Lord of the church may be calling them to pursue gospel ministry. This goal is in accordance with the mandate given to the Subcommittee on Ministerial Training by the general assembly to “assist the churches in seeking out men with apparent gifts for the gospel ministry, and in pressing upon them its urgent claims.”

This goal is also in keeping with the apostle Paul’s exhortation to young Timothy to “fan into flame the gift of God, which is in you” (2 Tim. 1:6), and “guard the good deposit entrusted to you” (2 Tim. 1:14). Paul also said, “What you have heard from me ... entrust to faithful men who will be able to teach others also” (2 Tim. 2:2).

Participating in the OPC Timothy Conference will be those who are already ministers, as Paul was, together with young men who must be urged to take up fully the “gospel trust” given to the church and

Topics and Speakers

We are pleased to have as conference speakers men who have pastoral, teaching, and church-planting experience and are deeply involved in the preparation of men for gospel ministry as mentors and instructors.

The Office of the Minister

David A. Crum (retired regional home missionary for the Presbytery of Southern California) will describe the responsibilities and privileges of the office of minister. He will explain the distinctions between pastors, teachers, and evangelists. He will also describe the various tasks that constitute a minister's work and emphasize the importance of this office for the well-being of the church and the witness of the gospel.

The Call to the Ministry

Joel D. Fick (pastor of Redemption OPC in Gainesville, Florida, and a member of the Subcommittee on Ministerial Training) will explore the various ecclesiastical and personal elements involved in a call to the ministry and provide guidance for the participants in their own consideration of whether to pursue the ministry.

Seminary Education: What and Why

Dr. David VanDrunen (professor at Westminster Seminary California and a member of the Subcommittee on Ministerial Training) will explain what a Reformed seminary education involves and why we believe that it is necessary for future ministers in light of our commitment to raising up a learned ministry.

Preparing for the Ministry Now

Christopher D. Hartshorn (regional home missionary for the Presbytery of Southern California) will explain to participants how to diligently prepare themselves now for a future in the ministry. He will include discussion of both academic preparation in an undergraduate program and personal preparation in regard to their participation in the life of the church, piety, financial stewardship, family commitments, etc.

The Process Toward Ordination

Danny E. Olinger (general secretary of the Committee on Christian Education) will draw together the elements of instruction received during the conference and set out the various steps that a candidate for OPC ministry must undergo as he comes under care, is licensed, and is finally ordained. He will give a sense of the work of a presbytery's candidates and credentials committee and the nature of the exams that it administers, and will indicate how seminary education and pastoral internships fit into this process.
